Each person travels their own respective path in search of a fulfilling career. Dr. Justice Lance and Dr. Nicole Juntz were led to the field of chiropractic medicine from different experiences when they were young and planning their futures. Together, they offer patients relief from pain and many other ailments at their clinics-Sports, Spine & Wellness-located in Milledgeville and Greensboro.

Lance describes his call to alternative medicine came when he was a sophomore in college and had one of his horses adjusted. He grew up riding and competing with horses and had a horse with a lameness issue.

“After many attempts to fix the problem with traditional veterinarian medicine, we took her to an animal chiropractor,” says Lance. “Within 20 minutes the horse could walk and run with no other issues.”

Intrigued by a career that would offer a chance to alleviate pain and suffering, Lance decided to join the field of chiropractic medicine.

For Juntz, her journey into medicine began when she was 16 years old and driving her sister to see a local chiropractor. During one visit the doctor noticed that Juntz suffered from menstrual cramps and offered to treat her for the pain. After a few visits, her pain dissolved and her interest in the field developed.

She reflects, “The changes that I experienced were so amazing to me that I began thinking about how wonderful it would be to do that for others.”

For both physicians, helping others live a higher quality of life is the most rewarding aspect of the practice. Lance adds, “We get the largest amount of pleasure out of just being able to help people enjoy life and do things they love.”
